CHRIST THE KING, YEAR A - 22 NOVEMBER 2020

JUDGMENT NEAR AND FAR

WE GO THROUGH repetitions and cycles so that the divine lessons may ever sink deeper into our lives. The virtues (or vices) and values we hold dear and live for certainly impact our relationships with God and others.

The article in the Creed that we recite every Sunday—He will come again in glory to judge the living and the dead and his kingdom will have no end—conveys a message that we should never forget as we come to the end of our Liturgical Year this week. Our Gospel this Sunday reinforces it even more: He will judge us in the end.

We need not wait for the end of time to peer into the verdict. The way we treat our sisters and brothers today says plenty about our soul's future.

The theologian Hans Urs von Balthasar once said, "Each person, whose life will someday be examined by the Judge, should ponder this constantly: in the most miserable of our fellow human beings we have already met our Judge."

As we celebrate the Solemnity of Christ the King today, we are also confronted with the fundamentals of our faith: who or what dominates our life? Who or what demands our homage, loyalty, service, and sacrifice?

Last shot: "We sacrifice for what we love. And the passions and the people we are always willing to sacrifice for, no matter what? Those are our objects of worship. And, sooner or later, we as individuals and a society become what we worship" (from It is Right and Just, by S Hahn & McGinley, 2020).

Blessings,
Rico Angelo

EVER ANCIENT, EVER NEW

(Quotes from the past)

"But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." – 1 Corinthians 15:20

BUT NOW IS Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. (1) Christ was and is the first of those that rise again, both in order of dignity and of merit. (2) He was first in the Divine will and intention. (3) First causally, for by Him we shall all rise again. (4) Temporally, for Christ was the first in time to rise to everlasting life; for though some before Him were raised to life by Elijah and Elisha, yet they rose to this mortal life only, and again died; but Christ was the first to rise to the eternal life of bliss and glory. So explain Chrysostom, Anselm, Ambrose, Theophylact, Theodoret, and others. The word for first fruits properly signifies this, and implies others to follow. So is Christ called the "first-begotten of the dead," ie, rising before all others, and, as it were, being born again from the dead.

It seems from this to be a point de fide that no one rose before Christ to everlasting life. Those, therefore, who at the death of Christ are said to have arisen (S. Matthew 27:52), rose after Him in the way of nature, if not of time, for their resurrection depended on Christ's as its cause. Francis Suarez points out this (p3 qu53, art 3).

The earliest fruit of the earth, which under the Old Law was to be offered to God, was called the "first fruits;" so Christ, after His resurrection, was offered to God as the first fruits of the earth, into which He had been cast as a corn of wheat, and from which He sprang forth again in the new birth of the resurrection.- Cornelius a Lapide, Commentary of 1 Corinthians
